About the project

Development of a risk assessment methodology and tool for

- building/strengthening expertise in the risk identification, assessment/analysis and management of front liners and managers in prison and probation services, of judges and stakeholders. They should take a long-term perspective and be aware that vulnerable individuals need to be constantly monitored and/or supervised in the community. Therefore, the exchange of information between practitioners is of paramount importance (collecting evidences/facts/info of what happened before imprisonment, tie them up with elements from the individual's experience in prison and, finally, assess the risk for the community before/after release);
- enhancing cooperation among actors working at risk assessment in prison and probation services, fostering information and intelligence sharing and guaranteeing cross-domain interoperability.

Boosting measures alternative to imprisonment by

- enhancing prison and probation staff professional competences to provide and implement exit strategies before release. They are targeting inmates convicted for acts of terrorism. Great emphasis will be given to lessons from the RAN WGs;
- empowering cooperation with the judiciary system, law enforcement agencies (community policing and inter-agency cooperation) and stakeholders to implement community sanctions.
